FOR BEDTIME

Danny Crosses the Laughing Brook.

Look long enough and hard enough You'll always find a way To reach the place or get the thing You're hoping that you may.

Danny Meadow Mouse peeped out from under the tangle of matted grass back toward the Smiling Pool. Plunger the Osprey was rising higher and higher in the air and there was nothing in his great claws. It was clear that he had failed to catch the Big Pickerel. Big Pickerel.

"I'm glad of it," muttered Danny, which, when you think of it, was rather funny, for the Big Pickerel had been watching for Danny himself and would have liked nothing better than snap his big jaws on him. But Dannye knew so well what it felt like to be hunted that, though he was rather glad that the Big Pickerel had been given a fright, he was also glad that he had escaped.

Of Billy Mink, Snapper the Turtle and the Big Pickerel he could see nothing at all, and rightly guessed that all were in hiding. Reddy Fox was sitting on the opposite bank that all were in hiding. Reddy Fox was sitting on the opposite bank looking up at Plunger and grinning in the most provoking way.

"They've forgotten about poor little me," thought Danny, and his heart stopped pit-a-patting quite so fast. "The thing for me to do is to keep going while the going is good. I've got to get across to the other side but I don't dare swim across the Smiling Pool. The Laughing Brook comes in right here, and if I keep on following along the bank perhaps I will find a place where I can cross comes in right here, and if I keep on following along the bank perhaps I will find a place where I can cross it without having to swim. It isn't the water, but the things in the water. I fear." Danny shuddered as he thought of the Big Pickerel.

As soon as he had quite recovered his breath he started on, darting from one hiding place to another—here a bunch of grass, there a big mullein leaf, yonder a piece of bark, and again a pile of sticks. He never stopped out in the open. No, indeed! That would have been the very worst kind of Meadow Mouse folly!

Now the water in the Laughing Brook ran swiftly in places, leaped in merry little falls, or seemingly rested in quiet pools, but for a long, long way it effered no crossing-place for a tired little Meadow Mouse who was afraid to swim because of hungry fish who might be watching. Though he rested often Danny grew more and more tired.

All afternoon he traveled and he was getting just a little discouraged and almost a little hopeless, when just as the Black Shadows came, creeping silently through the Green just as the Black Shadows came, creeping silently through the Green Forest he came to a bridge. It was only an old log which had fallen across the Laughing brook, but for Danny it was a real bridge. He looked this way, that way and the other way. He listened with both ears. Then he scampered across and gave a tiny sigh of thankfulness. He was on the home side at last.
